
The Time Trap is a 1995 American erotic thriller film, starring Temuera Morrison, Madeleine Stowe and Ally Sheedy. A married couple must stop an ancient Egyptian time machine that had once been used to create the pyramids before it destroys the world in 1997. The movie is about an old-fashioned archaeologist professor who finds his father's old invention, since he had died years ago. He found out that his father was intending to invent some sort of time traveling device but never got around to completing it while he was still alive. He also inherited a piece he had made that he said was too incomplete to ever use. He does not know that it would be used decades later by an ancient Egyptian who built an enormous pyramid to stop an asteroid from hitting Earth in 1997 after his civilization was wiped out by the meteors. After the professor builds the machine, he decided to give it to his son, since he has expressed great interest in the curvaceous Egyptian women of the past. Shortly thereafter, while looking for some rare, ancient artifacts...one of his students is kidnapped because someone wanted him very badly. This all happens when the professor is invited to visit Egypt with museum officials for an exhibition of these items he just found. He finds out that he must retrieve an item in order to save her. It is located near the Sphinx, in the Valley of the Kings. He also finds out that he is not alone in this hunt when another professor, who studied under his father many years ago, decides to tag along on this crazy trip. They eventually fall into a trap when they try to help the kidnapped student, and then they must battle old Egyptian gods in order to survive...before it's too late...in 1997!

The film was filmed on location in Cairo (Egypt), Vienna (Austria), and Tunis (Tunisia). "The Time Trap" was released in the United States on September 7, 1995. The film was released on DVD by Columbia TriStar Home Entertainment on August 31, 2005. The screenplay for the film was featured in the book "Screenplay: Writing an Effective Adaptation".
